NETWORK BRIEF

LET'S PUSH
CATERING!

From the Founder

Team,

Over the past few months, we have seen stronger alignment across the network, greater consistency in execution, and continued momentum across the business. That progress is worth recognizing, and it only happens when we move together.

As we look ahead to the months leading into the holiday season, now is the time to keep building. Strengthen local partnerships. Increase catering to neighbourhood businesses. Create relationships today that can turn into repeat business in the months ahead.

Thank you for the continued effort, consistency and commitment. Let's keep the momentum going.

Sincerely,
Trushna Makadia

PRODUCT FRESHNESS & QUALITY STANDARDS

Hello Lee, Hello Chin – Delivering Freshness, Reducing Waste, Elevating Guest Experience

Why This Matters: Freshness is one of the strongest drivers of guest satisfaction. Our commitment to Make Lee, Make Often ensures every product we serve delivers on that promise. Shorter batch production cycles = fresher products, improved guest satisfaction, and reduced waste. Together, we can achieve all three.

ACTIONS REQUESTED

1. Guacamole Standards

- Prepare guacamole in smaller batches throughout the day.
- Avoid overproduction during slow periods.
- After the dinner rush, prepare one fresh batch for the next business day.
- Monitor usage throughout the day and avoid overproduction.
- Discard immediately any product that is oxidizing or has lost its vibrant green appearance, or food safety standards.

2. Salsa Standards

- Transfer all remaining salsa nightly into a clean, sanitized container.
- Label and store according to food safety procedures.
- Follow FIFO (First In, First Out) — older product must be used before any fresh batch is opened.
- Never place fresh salsa on top of existing product.
- Replace pans as needed to maintain presentation and sanitation.

3. Vegetable Preparation Standards

- Prep vegetables in smaller quantities throughout the day.
- Only prepare what is needed to support anticipated business levels while maintaining freshness, color, and crispness.
- Rotate product using FIFO to ensure older product is used first.
- Store vegetables in clean, sanitized, properly labeled containers.
- Never mix fresh product with existing product unless FIFO procedures are followed.
- Replenish in small batches as needed.
- Discard any vegetables that no longer meet freshness, quality, or food safety standards.

4. Freshness Reminder

Vegetables are one of the first products guests see. Keeping them fresh, crisp, and colorful makes them crisp, vibrant, and appealing goes a long way in reinforcing the quality guests expect from Guac Mex Grill.

5. Key Expectations

- Prioritize freshness over volume production.
- Discard any product showing inconsistent color, texture, or appearance.
- Follow FIFO procedures consistently.
- Report any product quality concerns to management immediately.

Remember: Guests notice freshness. Smaller batches prepared more often deliver a superior guest experience.

OUR COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE

By embracing the Make Lee, Make Often standard, we're not just changing how we prepare food — we're changing our brand promise. Freshness can't be compromised. It's a daily discipline that sets our brand apart from others.
